Betty Bauman, the founder of the Ladies, Let's Go Fishing saltwater fishing seminar, caught a 58-pound dolphin on a 30-pound spinning outfit Saturday fishing 28 miles out of Islamorada in 1,400 feet on Caribsea with women from her program and Capt. Kenny Spaulding. In addition to Bauman's personal-best dolphin, the group also caught dolphin of 32 and 25 pounds, 24 schoolies and three tripletails.

Neal Laue's Plastered hooked a blue marlin estimated at 500 pounds 22 miles out of Port Everglades Inlet. Rob Morgan fought the blue on 30-pound tackle for the first 75 minutes, then the rest of the crew took turns fighting the fish over the next three hours before the marlin, which never came closer than 40 feet to the boat, broke the line.

Raymond Nel caught a 4.93-pound bass Sunday to win the Everglades Bassmasters of South Florida One Largemouth Bass Tourney, Father's Day Edition, at Everglades Holiday Park, where rising water levels made for slow fishing. Nel, who caught the biggest fish on a jig, won more than $1,100. The tournament had over 55 paid entries and several youngsters under 12 who fished for free.

Capt. Alan Zarembo reported that peacock bass continue to bite in urban canals, as do a variety of other cichlids. Big peacocks were biting his half- and quarter-ounce AZ Jungle Jigs pitched around ledges, while smaller fish were hitting small jerkbaits.

Billy New and his son Chris, 19, and Mark McCord and his son Hunter, 16, all of Georgia, caught 14 peacocks up to 6 pounds in the C-100.

Nick Morenc of Irvine, Calif., caught jaguar guapotes, oscars, spotted tilapia, some peacocks and Midas, Mayan, banded and blackbelt cichlids in two days of fishing in canals from Kendall to Boynton Beach.

Richardson, Weber stand as Heat answer for no 2016 draft picks

By Ira Winderman
Sun Sentinel

JUNE 22, 2016, 9:00 AM | MIAMI

Pat Riley calls the Miami Heat "an every-other-year draft team."

His perspective is that when living in the moment when it comes to remaining in contention, there is a time and a place for the NBA Draft.

This year appears to be neither the time nor the place for the Heat.

In fact, a case could (and perhaps should) be made that the Heat already have taken care of the 2016 NBA Draft in advance of Thursday's selections at Barclays Center in Brooklyn.

By Chris Perkins
Sun Sentinel

JUNE 16, 2016, 2:40 PM | DAVIE

If you're among the Dolphins fans who blamed guard play for the downfall of the offense last season, you may be surprised to learn that Dallas Thomas and Billy Turner, the same starters from last season, were still taking first-team reps on Thursday's final day of minicamp.

But don't read too much into that. Coach Adam Gase said that doesn't mean much in June.

"I don't even think we really have a depth chart right now," Gase said.
